English engines and cars, although inferior to our own, have been introduced into many foreign countries by the sheer force of English enterprise and business energy and tact. If any of our engine bui ders could get a contract in England for a nundred ocomot ves, it would be worth while to se them at cost for the saice of the opening it would afford to the British rai way market. And as Eng is a capital contro s so many rai ways in 'oreign countries, perhaps we might thus open a way to sell our locomotives through them to those lines. CF ARITY.

Not once alone to turn thy face In pity for a brot ter's sin.

Not once to open tenerar arms
And let the dove, Firgiveness, in.

Not once to heed the Master's word
And bury wounds aid heal the pain;
But through the woof of life to weave
The pattern of a read or a year. The pattern o'er and o er again.

Thus over graves of broken trust, The try of a sweet regret
May make the bitterest memories sweet, And hide the foulest ruin yet.

Thus in the stagnant deeps of life
The lilies of white peace may shine, To make his chirity more plain, Anc human pity more divine.
